Addiction Studies Program

Our mission is to provide education and training for bachelor’s and master’s level students and area treatment professionals that reflects excellence in experientially-based and empirically-supported chemical dependency treatment.

www.utexas.edu/research/cswr/tattc

Highlights

• Published research based survey instruments for assessing chemical dependency agencies for culturally-competent services for Mexican Americans and African Americans.

• Hold classes at local treatment agencies where clients in recovery teach students about addiction and the recovery process.

• Provide continuing education workshops for local treatment agency staff on a variety of unique topics such as “The Journey Within: An Integrative, Transformational Experience through Breathwork, Music and Art” and “The Practice of Recovery: A Buddhist Approach to Healing Addiction.”

• Provide courses for bachelor’s and master’s level students from a variety of disciplines to include: Social Work, Psychology, Nursing, Education and others.

• UT Austin is the home of the Center for Students in Recovery (CSR) and is a national leader in the collegiate recovery movement. Founded in 2004, CSR provides a safe, healthy and welcoming environment for students to cultivate life skills and celebrate recovery successes. Collegiate recovery programs on college campuses provide many significant benefits. They not only have the potential to save lives, but are also essential for academic success – promoting persistence, retention and graduation. And as the largest public university with a recognized collegiate recovery program, UT Austin will be a resource for other UT universities establishing their own programs.